hi, actually I have a real job! I am an 'instructor' of English but in relation to business issues to Japanese business who, primarily, work for US companies that have offices over here. My first 2 classes are ESP, English with a Special Purpose, in this case giving presentations. Where I know anything about business, I don't know. But the pay is outrageous! Granted, Tokyo is expensive but you do get paid very well. Its quite professional in dress, especially when meeting with clients so I went shopping, of course, and bought a cute suit at Jigsaw. But, God, the clothes are sooooo expensive here, I can't over it. I wonder how young people, on their own, handle it. They probably live at home or in flats that are much cheaper than ours. Well, our weekend was semi-exciting. Alex's girlfriend Chrisanthi was in Tokyo for a few nights for a conference so we went out with her on Saturday night. Other than that we laid around a lot and talked about going somewhere but didn't. Next weekend I think we'll get out of town and maybe go to Kamakura, which is on the ocean. I'm getting a little city-sick. Oh, I think I know which road you were on when you were here- that was lined with trees and had lots of shops and cafes. I'm pretty sure it was Omotesando in Aoyama. Its really lovely and has Parisian-esque outdoor cafes and all the swank boutiques. That's where I went shopping the other day.

I don't know how Nick is doing, except that he pitching on a baseball team and working A LOT. His job is very good but because the company is small, but growing, he has a lot of responsibility so he often works Saturdays as well as full week days. Unfortunately, he's not well rewarded with a fat paycheck, either. Its a mechanical engineering firm, in case you didn't know what he did. I must say I feel proud when I tell people 'my brother is an engineer'. As far as I know he is still split from Jen but is still dealing with it by himnself. Its very nice of you to ask after him, I appreciate that.

I'm sorry you are on an 'emotional rollercoaster' right now. What can you do on your free time that may help you either refocus or get your mindoff things, temporarily. Are you close to any country areas to take a walk or a lake or beach? something outdoorsy but pleasant? Its hard not having a close girlfriend to 'escape' with, isn't? I may be able to become friends with one woman I work with but that remains to be seen- I guess, I sometimes want the benefit of a friend but don't want to put in all the effort to set it up. It was nice to see Chrisanthi and actually we had a 2 hour girtie-chat on the phone when she was here Friday night. It was really nice to 'dish' to someone other than Chris!

Well, I need to get ready for work- I'm training all this week and my classes start next week. Training sucks and I really don't like my trainer- a man named Sean from Australia- I think he's sexist and offensive. Anyway! I love you and look forward to hearing from you soon, love, Catherine

Hi, Cat-

I hope this e-mail finds you well. It is hard to believe, but i have brought the card i wrote you weeks ago to mail. Of course everything in there is now obsolete, but it is a cute card. I miss you. Remeber how i told you about that guy Kurt Campbell who's the Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Asian Affairs, well he is going with this other woman (actually from my office)to Tokyo this week. Do you want me to give him your number and maybe you and Chris can meet him for a drink or somethin'???

Let me know so I can get him the info before he leaves. I had a pretty boring weekend. I did, however, go iwth my Mom to see the " Picasso:The Early Years" exhibit yesterday. It was wonderful. I must say that I found it overwhelming to see just how much work he produced- and then to realize that was only some of his work from his EARLY years...jeez!!!! Otherwise, I am depressed. I float from being sad to angry often and easily. What can I do but weather the storm. I hope you're doing ok. Have you started tutoring in English conversation???? Let me know how you are and what you're up to. I love you and miss you. Also, how's Nick doing? write me back.

Love, ME
