Ms. Lorrie McHugh
Deputy Assistant to the President
The White House
Washington, DC.

Dear Lorrie:

Mike suggested that I drop you a note about my confidential assistant, Monica Lewinsky. Her resume is attached.

She is terrific--bright, energetic and imaginative. I would like Monica to stay here as long as I do. However, she has more skills than her current job requires, and this isn't a job she wants for life. As a result, I have advised her that she should try to move into a more substantive job, either here or in the White House. Unlike many people, she is actually following my advice. She would like to work in the White House, where she started work in Washington. She would great as an organizer in the press operation or as an event planner in the communications office.

Mike says that you handle the really hard work over there, such as hiring. Please keep Monica in mind as appropriate jobs open up.

Yours,
